If YES, why?

With reservations - see below. I do not feel that the law should prevent retailers opening. However, I do not feel that people who have religious objections to working on Easter Sunday should be compelled to do so by their employer, unless it is part of their contract of employment and agreed to. No employer should be able to take action against an employee for religious refusal to work.

If NO, why?

I believe that the provisions of the present legislation are adequate. I do not favour further deregulation. In a community where the residents already have access to a wide range of shopping options and hours the continuation of the present law has minimal impact on the quality of life. I therefore support the status quo.

If NO, why?

Families need to have time to be together. Opening shops erodes into family time which we have very little of. NZ culture is changing so fast, but we need to remember our Christian past and future.

I believe this holiday will give family quality time together. With a lot of family issues going on within the family circle e.g. family violence, child abuse, it is paramount to give family members every opportunity to better and support their relationships. This is one of those days wherein, they don't need to think about going to work and feel obliged to do so for fear of upsetting their employer.

Because I work in retail. I've also owned shops. I believe we shouldn't trade. Not because it's Easter Sunday, but because it should be a family day. Two days out of the entire year we get a day off. I want to keep it this way.

Let's keep most employees, mostly lower paid ones, with one extra precious days for them to enjoy with their families (and for the Christian ones, in Church). There would be pressure on people to work whatever the legal situation, if this was changed

I believe that everyone should have the right to follow their conscience when it comes to deciding whether to shop or not on any given day. While I am personally disgusted about the bad treatment meted out to genuine Bible-believing Christians in many parts of the Western world, that does not make it right for people to be forced into following any particular belief-system, (including that belief-systems traditions).

Shops should have flexibility to open at least on Easter Friday or Sunday, ideally both. Should be able to buy a wine at the movies, we aren't a Christian country. Freedom of choice, currently confusing.

If NO, why?

Because we need to realise some people require time to contemplate where they have come from and where they would like to have their country and their lives to go. Why we need honesty and truth in our lives. Our roots and our future. Too much emphasis on shopping, shopping, shopping, it is no answer to family unity or pleasure.

Do you want Council to adopt an Easter Sunday
shop trading policy? No

If NO, why?

Easter Sunday is one of the few remaining Christian holidays left. The purpose of the holiday is to celebrate the risen Christ and as a religious holiday it should be observed in the Christian way due to its nature (being a sacred remembrance). This would require that the shops close and there are many other days to shop that do not interfere with Christian observance.

Do you want Council to adopt an Easter Sunday shop trading policy? No

If NO, why?

To me Easter Sunday is not a holiday but a holy day. It is a major event in the Christian calendar, where Christians gather together to celebrate the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the grave. I would rather spend Easter Sunday honouring God, than being required to work, as has happened, on previous Sundays when I have worked in retail. My right not to work may have looked great on paper but did not work in practice!

I strongly oppose trading on Easter and other public holidays, not on religious grounds but because of the effects on employment and families, and on the nature of NZ society from the gradual disappearance of days on which we can ALL enjoy leisure and recreation together. The shift to 24/7 trading and 24/7 employment has not increased the amount of money to be spent in retail outlets, just the number of hours across which retail businesses compete. But it has increased the hours days on which people are expected to work, at the same time fragmenting jobs into part-time and casual employment to cover those hours. The outcome is not just shifts at work but shifts at home, as many parents try to juggle hours to be with their children (as by law) let alone with each other. In most jobs, penal rates for 'unsociable hours' are a thing of the past, except for the time and a half and time off in lieu by law for certain special public holidays, such as Easter. There are now very few times at which friends and extended families can get together, because of 24/7 work commitments. And the idea that one should be 'free' to trade away public holiday entitlements in employment contracts shows complete lack of understanding about the powerless of most job-seekers in an economy run at 6% unemployment. Yet there is nothing more delightful about the NZ way of life than to see the way the whole country relaxes and enjoys family life at the beach or picnicking in public parks and local music events on public holidays like Easter weekend. It is just lovely to see everyone, from all our differing communities, out together enjoying themselves. This is the heart of life on the Kapiti coast, but it is people and families, not business opportunities, that are important. We should have more public holidays like Easter, not fewer. Traditional religious celebration days for Christians may be less important to many Pakeha New Zealanders these day – but where are the public holidays for other religious traditions and communities? And what about the days that celebrate public life together – like Labour Day, Anzac Day and the regional anniversary days that we all look forward to. We have far fewer public holidays than many European countries – we should have more of these days off together, not less, and they should be protected by law from the encroachment of work obligations. The long weekends that public holidays – the longer the better – are beneficial to our personal health and essential for the health our communities. Easter trading is just another controversial issue (like liquor licensing, gambling and prostitutions) that governments have pushed down to local governments in the name of 'community empowerment' in order to divert political flack from themselves. Please don't buy into it. Please protect our last remaining public holidays together.

Do you want Council to adopt an Easter Sunday
shop trading policy? No

If NO, why?

NZ society is based on the Christian tradition although the number of people who profess to be Christian is dwindling. Many people living in NZ are from other religions. Easter Sunday is the most important day in the Christian Church and trading on a Sunday lessens the importance of that day. It does no harm to remind people of their traditions and where they come from.

2. If YES, why?
3. If NO, why?	N2 society is based on the Christian tradition although the number of people who profess to be Christian is dwindling. Many people living in N2 are from other religions. Easter Sunday is the most important day in the Christian Church and trading on a Sunday lessens the importance of that day. It does no harm to remind people of their traditions and where they come from.

I live and work on the Kapiti Coast. I am against shops opening on Easter Sunday because I'm guaranteed time off to spend with my family. There are plenty of opportunities to shop on other days over Easter.
